Seanon Carter (from left) and Robin Morris of Amdocs BCS Vision and Peace Passers President Candace Cooper unload soccer balls and cleats just delivered by Cooper. The items' destination is Iraq.

For about a year, Robin Morris and her co-workers have been sending care packages to Maj. Dan Streetman, a former boss, and his Army brigade in Iraq. When Streetman told her that he and his fellow soldiers were interested in holding a soccer clinic and a league for Iraqi youth, Morris went to the only source she knew for donations: Peace Passers.

An upstart nonprofit agency headquartered in Charlotte, Peace Passers' mission is to collect and distribute new and used soccer equipment to needy people and places around the world.

Co-founded in January 2008 by Charlottean Candace Cooper, the agency collects soccer balls, shoes and other gear from people in various countries.
